To Whom It May Concern:

This is a letter of recommendation for Bret Jones.

I own a small consulting business that does data recovery, PC repair, networking, and desktop support. Bret was hired in October of 2020 to help me clear the backlog of business laptops and all-in-one computers. I assumed it would take him a few months to gain enough confidence to be proficient doing so. I was wrong.

Bret has an amazing aptitude with mechanical and electrical components. He has replaced motherboards, LCDs, CPUs, and solid-state drives. He is always on time and has a meticulous mind for solving complex problems and getting things done.

He has a natural curiosity, follows directions carefully, and is very analytical. He has good communication skills. At some point, I would like him to learn how to engage customers as a consultant. This requires building relationships, solving problems, and selling. I believe that if he works hard to develop interpersonal and leadership skills, he will be very successful in his career path.

Bret would make an excellent engineering student and will surely be a great asset to any school he attends and company that he works for.

We are lucky to have him here in Georgia. I will follow his growth and career path with pride.

Sincerely,

R. Steve Walker
